The Klingons are the most stubborn, and perhaps most determined, enemy that the Federation has encountered. After a century of losing stalemated wars with the Romulans and repeated internal civil strife from roughly 2120-2212, the Klingon people's desire for domination and empire remains unbroken. Under new leadership, an armistice with the Romulans, and armed with captured technological breakthroughs, even the century-and-a-half old spaceframes of the D2 (now called a D2z by the Federation) can be and are upgraded to modern standards. In the past thirty years, probing encounters with the Empire have become more common, and it is well known that they will be trying to assert their influence in the Arcanis sector sharply.

The reinvigorated Empire is nothing to ignore the way Earth did for the previous sixty years. There are rumors of new engineering initiatives, greater unity among the Great Houses, and more which should give Federation planners pause.
